INTERESTING AND INFORMATIVE ADDRESS AT METHODIST CHURCH SUNDAY MORNING

"We are fighting alcohol in beverages and in this great fight to maintain the 18th amendment we must be willing to face the situation," said the Rev. R. S. Povey, Field Secretary of the Christian Civic League of Maine, in his address at the Methodist Church in Bethel last Sunday morning.

Mrs. Mary C. Herrick went to Portland the first of the week.

Mrs. Mabelle Sloan of Norway called on her niece, Mrs. Gertie Hapgood, and family Sunday.

Mrs. R. C. Dalzell left Monday for the Deaconess hospital for observation.

Mrs. Mary McCrea has given up her rent on High Street and is boarding with Mrs. Clark.

Mr. and Mrs. Lemore Currier have rooms at Mrs. Charles Crosby's at Skillington.

Elmer Stevens and Lyman Wheeler attended a pine blaster meeting at the De Wit Hotel, Lewiston, Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira Hawkins of Errol, N. H., were overnight guests of her sister, Mrs. Leroy Andrews, and family Sunday.

Kathryn and Virginia Andrews spent the week end with Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Hall and family at West Bethel.

Dr. W. R. Chapman is in New York to attend the May breakfast, which is the final event of the Rubinstein Club for the season.

There will be a Parent Teachers meeting Monday, May 9. The committee in charge is Mrs. Grover Brooks, Mrs. H. C. Rowe, and Miss Leeman.

Contrary to a report understood to be circulated around town, Crockett's Garage has not been closed the past winter, and is now open for business.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Lurvey have moved from Skillington to the upstairs rent in Eugene Van Den Kerckhoven's house on Paradise Street.

Mrs. Nancy Holbrook has returned to her home in North Anson, Maine, after spending the winter with her daughter, Mrs. C. W. Hall.

Mr. and Mrs. Noel Smith of Northampton, Mass., arrived Saturday to spend a week with Mrs. Smith's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Brown.

Mr. and Mrs. B. Patterson went to Watford Saturday to see Mr. Patterson's aunt, Mrs. Riggs, who is very ill. They returned Monday noon.

Mr. and Mrs. Moses Brown and Martha Brown, from Portland, spent the week end with Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Brown.

The school children conveyed by H. H. Brown brought him a very handsome May basket Monday night. Later they were invited and treated to ice cream.

Mrs. Wallace Clark was given a surprise party Saturday when thirty of her friends from Rumford arrived to honor her birthday. The time was pleasantly passed with cards, music, and refreshments.

Mrs. Milo McAllister, who has returned from the hospital where she has been for some time following an automobile accident, was presented with a well-filled Sunshine box Friday by the American Legion Auxiliary.

Dr. Mary Ellen Chase of Northampton, Mass., was the week end guest of her aunt, Mrs. Addison Herrick. Dr. Chase spoke at Bowdoin Friday night on "The Peculiar Genius of Thomas Hardy."

Miss Martha Stearns has been the first winner out of five for two weeks writing up the Eldergram at Elder's Cafe at Portland. Her friends will also be interested to learn that she has been offered a position in Florida for the winter.

Mrs. Karl Jackson Stearns, who has been staying with Mr. Stearns' parents Mr. and Mrs. N. A. Stearns at their farm on Grover Hill for the past eighteen months has had her household goods moved to the village where she has employment for the summer.

The new passenger train schedule on the Canadian National went into effect last Sunday. East bound trains now leave Bethel at 7:42 a. m. and 3:27 p. m., arriving at Portland at 10 a. m. and 5:40 p. m. Westbound trains are 10:05 a. m. and 8:05 p. m. They leave Portland at 8 a. m. and 5:40 p. m. Sunday there is one train each way, west at 10:05 a. m. and east at 3:27 p. m. These hours are standard time.

The meeting of the Oxford County Medical Association will be held at Bethel Inn May 9. James M. Sturtevant, A. B. M. D., one of the attending staff of the Babies' Hospital of New York City, also associate in diseases of children at Columbia University, will be the principal speaker. His subject will be "Congenital Malformations of Infancy," with lantern slides from X-ray pictures.

DR. CHAPMAN CONDUCTED OPENING NUMBER OF CENTENNIAL PROGRAM AT PORTLAND TUESDAY EVENING

The following advance notice of Dr. Chapman's appearance at Portland, appeared in the Portland Sunday Telegram of May 1.

"One of the features on the opening program of the Centennial and Music Week of Portland on Tuesday evening at City Hall, will be the appearance of Dr. William R. Chapman. He needs no introduction to the music lovers of Portland or Maine. For 30 years at the Maine Music Festivals, which he organized and conducted in Portland so successfully, he produced the greatest artists of the world, and the leading oratorios and operas.

In 1920 he was chosen by Gov. Carl E. Milliken to conduct the Maine Centennial program at Portland and at that time he organized the largest band ever assembled in Maine, 214 players, and a chorus of 1,200 voices. "Last year he was honored by being invited by the management of the new Waldorf-Astoria Hotel to write a grand march for the dedication of the opening of the magnificent ballroom, which he called "The Waldorf-Astoria March." This was received with great enthusiasm. The march has been acclaimed as the most popular new march of the year, and is scored for piano and grand orchestra. The greatest artists of the world participated in this dedication, besides his chorus and orchestra.

"Among them were Mme. Schumann-Hensel, Mme. Jeritza, and Mrs. Carrie Jacobs Bond. Hundreds were turned away on this occasion.

"Dr. Chapman, when invited by the committee to conduct this march on Tuesday evening, as the opening number for the Centennial of Portland, and Music Week, replied that he would be delighted to do so, as he would not be obliged to return to New York until Thursday. Dr. Chapman will be assured of a warm welcome, as he has not appeared at a concert in Portland since 1926.

"Dr. Chapman's latest composition for ladies' voices, "Flying Through the Air," words by Mrs. Chapman, is scheduled for Wednesday evening. This is dedicated to the Rossini Club and its conductor, Mrs. Marion Wentworth Tiefts of Westbrook."

BETHEL GIRL WRITES FROM WASHINGTON, D. C.

Miss Ruth M. Gilnes writes her mother, Mrs. Karl J. Stearns, the following:

"It is cherry blossom time in Washington. I have seen many beautiful sights. First we drove to the Washington Memorial Tower, which is over 575 feet high. From the top one can see the entire District of Columbia and over to Virginia State. Directly across the reflection pool is the magnificent tomb of Lincoln. Both these memorials reflect at night in a beautiful artificial pool.

"Then we drove around the Smithsonian buildings. The things we saw there were breath-taking—for example, carved figures of the wives of the Presidents with the actual clothing of each, even to Mrs. Coolidge. Here we also saw "Lindy's plane," We, which flew to Paris. We made eight trips around the White House lawns during the day.

"We went next through the National Library where we saw the true Declaration of Independence, letters written by George Washington, Abraham Lincoln and all the notables of our Nation up to 1932.

"After lunch at the Y. W. C. A., we drove to Virginia State, through the Army base at Fort Myers, Va., and to the famous Arlington Cemetery, through the gorgeous all marble amphitheatre to the tomb of the Unknown Soldier. That was my highest ambition. I am utterly powerless to describe the place. So quiet, so immense, so stately, so positively beautiful."

MARTINSON—WIGHT

Bethel friends of Miss Vivian A. Wright will be interested to learn of her marriage, which took place recently, to Edwin A. Martinson of Concord, Mass. Mr. Martinson is a graduate of Tufts College and has since travelled for the Atlas Plywood Corporation. Mr. and Mrs. Martinson plan to spend the summer in Bethel.

They have the best wishes of a large circle of friends.

Mrs. Belle Jones from Derry, N. H., is visiting her brother, W. F. Clark.

Mrs. Harry Lyon and family and Franklin Burris were Sunday callers at the Hapgood farm.

MEXICO WINS IN TENTH

Mexico caught Gould napping last Saturday and won in the tenth inning in a long hitting game. Quimby was off color due to a recent illness, while Browne's throwing arm was lame from two games pitched in wintry weather. Doug Daniels, one of the best players on the team, was out of the game, which seemed to upset the infield. Coupled with these handicaps the many batters pulled during the game was too much to overcome. Stanley was the only local player to show up well. He played errorless ball and garnered three singles. Vail also made three hits but did not do so well in the field.

The four lead-off men for Mexico secured two hits each while the other members secured one each. The score:

MAYOR GETS WEALTH AND TROUBLES COME

They Struck Oil on Mother's Farm in Texas.

New York.—J. Malcolm Crim, mayor of Kilgore, Texas, settled himself into an easy chair at the Hotel New Yorker and delivered himself of a lecture on the futility of being wealthy.

"I'm having fun," he said, "while I'm in New York. But it won't last long. You can't enjoy yourself when you get rich. Look at me."

Crim, in his own words, was "just a poor country boy" until December, 1930, when they struck oil on his mother's farm. Now he has so much money that he can't keep track of it.

Crim explained that he doesn't bank for publicity.

"One day they put a picture of me in the papers after the well came in," he said, "and I'm still getting letters. Every mortgage in the world was being foreclosed. People wrote me even from Russia that their mortgages were being foreclosed and would I please give them a little dough."

He ran General Stores.

Crim was elected mayor of Kilgore a year ago when the town was incorporated. Prior to his acquisition of wealth he ran a general store.

"I sold everything," he said, "from cradles to ceiling."

"I never went in politics," he explained. "I never even heard of that fellow Garner till lately. But I took the job as mayor because the town was getting overrun with the wrong kind of people. I took a census in January, and there were 930 people in town. I took another one in March, and there were 15,000 people there."

"We didn't have any streets worth mentioning, no water, no sewer system, no nothing. Some of the streets were so bad a snake couldn't crawl on them."

Used Church for Joll.

Crim said he hasn't erected any public buildings in Kilgore "except a church."

"We used the Baptist church for a jail," he said. "Then we got a little jail built and they used the church for a dance hall. Finally some fell low came into town one Sunday and set fire to our two churches. Burnt 'em down. So that made me mad. I built a Presbyterian church to get even."

Since he became wealthy, Crim said, he has been kept so busy he hasn't had a chance to enjoy life.

"It used to be," he said, "that I could take a vacation. Now I can't. I'm waiting here now for Mrs. Crim. She's coming in today from a Mediterranean cruise. I couldn't go because I was too busy."

Air Force Figures

Worry to Britain

London.—British aeronautical authorities are much concerned over Great Britain's increasingly inferior position on its air corps, as revealed by aircraft start lists which most of the nations have submitted to the League of Nations for consideration.

A study of these statistics shows that Great Britain is now fifth in number of all air strength and is rapidly being overtaken, even by Argentina.

Statistics submitted to the League by the various nations show their relative strength in first line aircraft and their total strength with all reserves as follows:

	First	Total
	Line	with all
	Aircraft	Reserves
France	1,671	3,600
Great Britain	700	1,424
Italy	...	1,071
Poland	...	1,071
Yugoslavia	545	657
Bosnia	462	619
Jugo-Slavia	627	924
Hungary	592	709
U. S. of America	1,762	2,501
Japan	3,881	3,859

It is believed, however, that Great Britain's numerical inferiority is considerably offset by the exceptionally high standard of her air force personnel and the superiority of her types of pursuit planes to those of most of the other nations.

Peon Class of Mexico

Has New Independence

Los Angeles.—Recent political activities in Mexico have resulted in new found independence to the laboring classes. Dr. James H. Batten, director of the Inter-American Foundation, who was a recent visitor here, declared "The revolution in Mexico" he said "has brought a new found independence to the laboring class of the country and is the beginning of a movement which finally will result in true democracy and a republican form of government."

College Day Romances

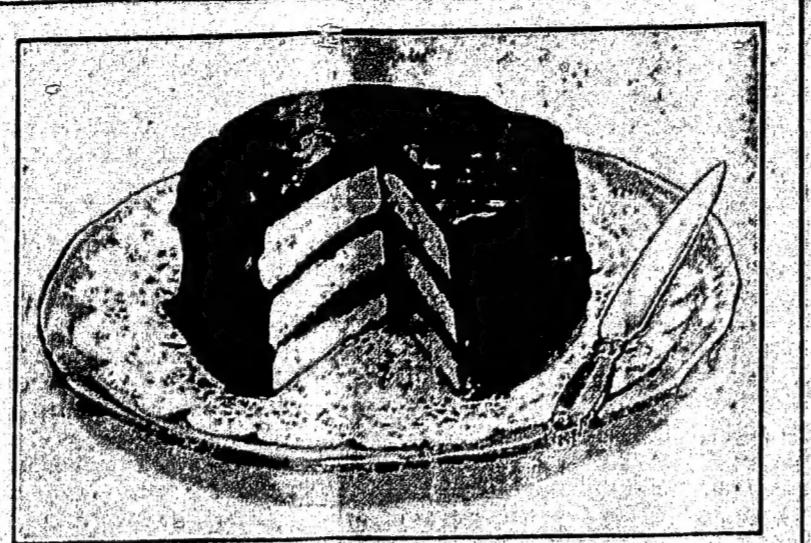

Prove Most Binding

Grenville, Ohio.—Romances between boys and girls of Denison University bind couples far more securely than those in the great "out-of-world" according to compiled records. Out of 250 campus marriages at the school have come only five divorces. It is an average of one marriage failure to each 70 weddings. The national average is one failure for each five or six marriages.

Falls Out Shirt Dies

New York.—When Frank Collins, forty-four, pulled a shirt from his dresser drawer, it accidentally freed a revolver beneath. The bullet penetrated his forehead, killing him.

MAKE PLAIN CAKE RICH WITH CHOCOLATE FLAVOR

EVERY housewife has a prized cake recipe for special occasions. But cakes baked every Saturday for daily family needs must be economical as well as tempting.

How fortunate therefore that chocolate flavor is a family favorite. Chocolate works wonders either with a simple family cake or one for special occasions. A chocolate frosting makes the plainest cake tempting, while chocolate batter makes your simplest cake rich.

One-Egg Chocolate Layer Cake

2 cups sifted cake flour or other

2 teaspoons baking shortening powder

1/2 teaspoon salt

1/2 cup milk

1 cup sugar

1/2 cup vanilla extract

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder, salt, sift together three times. Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar gradually. Add eggs, beat thoroughly. Add flour, alternately with milk, a small amount at a time. Beat after each addition until smooth. Add flavoring. Bake in two greased 9-inch layer pans, moderate oven (375° F.) 25 minutes, or in greased loaf pan, 3x8x2 inches, in moderate oven (350° F.) 50 minutes. Double recipe for three 10-inch layers. Spread with Soft Chocolate Frosting.

Soft Chocolate Frosting

4 squares unsweetened chocolate

1/2 cup sugar

1/2 cup milk

1/2 cup butter or shortening

1/2 cup melted and cooled

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder, salt. Sift together three times. Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar gradually. Cream together until light and fluffy. Add eggs and vanilla. Beat well. Add flour, alternately with milk, a small amount at a time. Beat after each addition until smooth. Fold in chocolate. Pour into greased muffin cups, filling two-thirds full. Bake in moderate oven (375° F.) 15 minutes. Cover with Soft Chocolate Frosting. Decorate with chopped nuts, cherries, coconut, or designs of melted chocolate. Makes 20 cakes.

You will find that these cakes served with fresh fruit in season or stewed fruit will make a delicious dessert.

YEARLING HEN NOT ALWAYS POOR 'BET'

MANY CAN QUALIFY AS PROFITABLE LAYERS

One way farmers and poultrymen can save this year is to keep most of last year's pullets so that fewer chicks will have to be raised, says H. H. Alp, poultry extension specialist of the college of agriculture, University of Illinois.

"In some instances it is good economy to keep most of last year's pullets. For one thing, they have gone through their most expensive depreciation. Last fall good pullets sold for $1 to $1.25 apiece, but these same birds probably would not sell for more than 50 to 75 cents this spring. This heavy depreciation is all because they have reached the hen class, and in the minds of the buying public they do not represent the potential value of a pullet."

"However, many of these yearling hens, if well bred, are far from being through as profitable layers. It is true that they may not make as high an annual production record, but they can be quite as profitable as many pullets. One big advantage of the production from yearling birds is that there should be no discount for small eggs."

"With the present knowledge of feeding and of management methods, it is not hard to have yearling birds laying well early in the fall and winter."

Chicks' Growth Helped by "All-Mash" System

Where dried buttermilk or skim milk is mixed in with the mash it enables the chickens to get their source of milk much more evenly than in any other way. This also is a wonderful source of vitamins for young chicks and helps to give the succulence which would not be obtained if only scratch grains were fed.

To sum up the advantages of an all-mash system: It keeps the chicks busier throughout the day; it supplies the chicks with many sources of protein; it enables a better distribution to the chicks of milk and the vitamins it contains and, furthermore, it insures a better distribution to the chicks of the minerals which are so essential for uniform growth.—Exchange.

Feeding Too Late

It was formerly a common practice to feed baby chicks too soon after hatching but now many farmers and poultrymen are going to the opposite extreme and waiting too long before feeding. About 24 hours are required to complete a hatch. That is it will be 24 hours from the time the first chicks hatch until the last ones are out of the shell. If the chicks are not fed until more than 48 hours after the hatch is completed some of the chicks are more than 72 hours old before they receive any nourishment. The long wait makes them weak and past desire to eat.

Forty-eight hours after the hatch is completed is now recommended as the maximum amount of time to withhold feeding. For best results the first feed should be given earlier.

To Get Production

In order to keep the pullets in laying condition, to get them to gain weight and produce eggs at the same time, J. H. Bodwell, poultry expert recommends:

1. Make the laying house clean and comfortable, which means have enough roosts, hoppers, fountains and have plenty of well-ventilated space for the flock.

2. Free the birds of lice, mites and worms before putting them in the house.

3. Darken the house when the flock is first moved to new quarters to prevent their worrying and losing flesh.

4. Remember that a hen cannot produce eggs without good feed any more than a windmill can turn without wind.

Benefits of All-Mash

An all-mash poultry ration that has given good success at Iowa state college is composed of 650 pounds of ground yellow corn, 350 pounds of ground heavy oats, 100 pounds of ground wheat, 80 pounds of meat scrap or 60 per cent protein tankage, 20 pounds of diced milk and four pounds of fine salt. In addition to this ration the flock should have a good supply of calcium grit and gravel. The all-mash ration saves labor and special care in balancing.—Prairie Farmer.

A hen owned by J. W. Wilson of Dunstable, England, laid 365 eggs in as many days, but missed on the 366th day.

Before 1920 only 50 to 70 per cent were raised. Due to control of the diseases which attack turkeys, the percentage has been raised to 85 to 90 per cent of the hatched.

ACCOUNTS AND BUDGET HELP TO SOLVE HOME PROBLEMS

of time with them and make a fuss over them?"

"No, they will find their way around very easily and their habits are very simple," said Mrs. Homemaker as she went to the telephone to extend the invitation to Mr. Accounts and Mrs. Budget.

LETUCE GROWER TELLS HIS METHODS

By S. W. Prout
Capo Elizabeth, Maine

Reprinted from the Sanford Tribune

Five years ago I started growing this iceberg lettuce in a small way, and in the past season we marketed about four acres of iceberg lettuce. From this acreage we sold 4,200 heads.

Iceberg lettuce seems to grow the best on the heavy type of loam, rather than sandy soils. The soil should be well tilled—tilled for at least three Fertilizing of iceberg lettuce is our biggest problem. If the soil is too high in nitrogen, the lettuce grows large, loose, and very coarse leaves, without forming a head; and the plant soon shoots to a seed stock. We find that applying twenty to twenty-five tons of cow manure to the acre the spring previous, and by using about 1,500 pounds of 4-8-4 or 5-8-7 commercial fertilizer, and 500 pounds of 16% acid phosphate to the acre, previous to planting, gives very good results.

Another method we have successfully used, and ranking second to the method previously stated is that of plowing in a green manure crop, namely, rye. The rye, if possible, is plowed in the fall before. Then to complete this second method of fertilizing, we use the same amount of commercial fertilizer as in the first method. We find either of these methods produce a good crop of lettuce under fair weather conditions.

Now in regard to sowing of seeds—the first seeds are sown under glass about the twentieth of March, and those are ready to be transplanted in the field from the first to the tenth of May. We sow seeds in the field about May 1, and then plantings are made every ten days or two weeks until the first of August. The rows are planted sixteen inches apart, and the plants are thinned to 12 inches apart.

We have tried several strains of iceberg lettuce, and find that New York Wonderful, and New York No. 5 are the best in this locality.

Summer cleared $3.26 from their supper held last week. The club is to use this money for a camping trip late in the summer.

The permanent brooder house plan

has been adopted by Merle Adams,

East Summer. Instead of having his several large portable range houses distributed over the range he has hauled them all together and made one long permanent house, using the several pens as separate pens.

Much time and labor is saved by this method of handling chicks before they are put on the range. They report a good demand for chicks and eggs this spring.

FARM BUREAU NEWS

Ten Oxford orchardists purchased 1021 apple trees through the county apple tree pool. "Say those are good trees aren't they?" said Robert Schenk of Norway when inspecting the shipment. "Yes" replied Fred Dunn, "particularly when you consider they only cost us 18 cents each." In addition to Mr. Dunn, the following orchardists purchased trees: L. E. Williams, Rumford; W. B. DeCoster, South Paris; Albert Beliveau, Rumford; Ralph Kluckert and Elmer G. McAlister, North Lovell; A. L. Cole, Edgar Colby, J. W. S. Colby, South Paris; and Henry French, Rumford Center. Of the 1021 trees, 563 were McIntosh. Other varieties were as follows: Cortland, 364; Wealthy, 30; Golden Delicious, 25; Early McIntosh, 12; Yellow Transparent, 7.

Large Typewriter Performance In the Finest of Small Writing Machines

Value is comparative. No portable typewriter has ever had all the remarkable convenience features of the Royal with the new Duo-Case. They include:

TEETH BRUSHING
AN ANCIENT RITEIndo-European of 1700 B. C., Did a Thorough Job.Chicago.—There is nothing modern about brushing of teeth, for the ancient Indo-European of 1700 B. C. made a rite of this particular hygiene act, members of the American Oriental Society, meeting in the Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago, were told. According to Dr.
George V. Heberlein, assistant professor of Semitics at the university,
the early Indians had no tooth paste,
but they did a thorough job nevertheless.For a toothbrush, the Indo-European men were using twigs from a hawthorn tree,
a species of the tree being recommended for the purpose. It was imperative that the bark remain on the twig.
Another method was to chew twigs or sticks of certain varieties of trees.
The "toothbrush" could be used but once, and then must be disposed of by leaving it in a clean place.There was a long list of days when the rite must either be omitted or performed in a different manner, and in such cases the cleaning of the mouth by rinsing with twelve mouthfuls of water was substituted. The time of the rite was at a prescribed time, the teeth being cleaned just before the bath.The size of the stick was rigidly specified, one authority giving the proper length as twelve angustis long;
an angustis being slightly less than an inch. Other authorities, however, specified various lengths for the various castes, the brahmans using the longest, of ten angustis.Various prayers were addressed to the cleaning stick both before and after its use, and professor Heberlein had translated one for the assembled Orientalists, as follows: "Oh, Lord of the Forest, grant us long life, strength, glory, prowess, cattle, riches, and knowledge."The dentalcavas is mentioned in early Buddhist literature, the words
"toothpick" and "toothpicks" appearing frequently. Professor Heberlein cited a passage which reads:
"There are five evils. One comes, resulting from the omission of the elev-ing of the tooth stick. Which five?
It is detrimental to the eyeight; the mouth becomes evil smelling; the taste conducting nerves of the tongue are not cleaned; bile, phlegm and food cover the tongue over, and one's meal does not please one."

Poem "Write Itself"

The poem "Mighty Like a Rose" was written by Frank Stanton, Sr., at a time when his infant son was very ill. He is quoted as telling of it as follows: "One night when I came home from the office I stooped upstairs to his crib and looked down into his feverish little face, and I tell you my heart nearly broke, for fear he was going to die. His mother and grandmother were standing by me, and he was asleep. Isn't he the sweetest little fellow? He's just like a rose," said his grandmother. I went to my room, picked up a piece of copy paper and the poem wrote itself."

Real Meaning of "Trade"

The word trade springs from imperial English and originally meant a path or road and is connected with the word tread, meaning walk or proceed. Beginning with the Hellenistic league, it took on a special reference to the path of ships. A ship going to China was bound on the China trade or path to China. As better was always associated with such voyages, the word trade gradually began to take on more significance in relation to the business of the voyage than to the voyage itself. Hence, foreign trade and domestic trade became standard terms in the language.

Inspiration From the Past

It is to the Greeks that we owe the Doric, Ionic and Corinthian columns which still decorate so many of our churches. Among the famous Roman temples which have given inspiration for modern churches and public buildings may be cited the Maison Carrée at Nîmes, which was the model for the Richmond (Va.) state capitol and for the Madeleine in Paris. The Roman Pantheon, which gave the idea with its great dome for St. Sophia in Constantinople and St. Peter's in Rome and many another church, is perfectly preserved and is used today
as a church.THE
D. S. BROOKS LETTERBethel, Maine
May 5, 1932

To the Citizen Family,

Dear Members:

I am going to relate here a concise account of my father's accident and healing. Please get it straight; and then, tell it to your friends. There are a few of my father's pupils of that last year of his teaching in the Rowe Hill District still remaining and living in Oxford County. Among these
I may name Frank Elsworth Brooks,
Elton Dunham, Mrs. Nora Hathorne;
Mrs. Annie Davis, and Mrs. Fannie Howe. These students of those far-off days will recall that fatal morning in the Fall of 1890, when father met with the awful accident that nearly caused his death.This letter may seem a little lengthy, but it will be full of interest to very many of you. Nothing will be stated that cannot be proved by reliable witnesses, though it happened nearly 42 years ago.We lived, in the earlier part of my boyhood, before moving onto the Liver-more and Harford Charge,—on the farm that father bought of my uncle, Ambrose Brooks. The big house was once used as a wayside tavern for the old stage route from Portland to Berlin before the railroad was built,—now known as the Canadian National.There are many interesting chapters written on my mind of this wonderful old place. Just prior to the time of which I am going to relate,
we had purchased a frisky young animal only partly broken as a driving horse, but father was a good manager with horseflesh and was making satisfactory progress with Prince,—driving him back and forth night and morning for school purposes. I attended school with father; and was with him when the casualty took place. We were driving along this, clear, snappy morning at a brisk pace over the frozen road toward the school house. Between Newton Bryant's and where Colby Ring now lives, a flock of sheep hearing the spanking of the horse's hoofs on the hard ground, jumped out of some bushes by the roadside, on our left, thus frightening Prince. Before you could count ten the nervous
animal had shied sharply to the right, overturning our carriage; and the horse, himself, was lying in a heap, tangled up with straps of the harness and broken shafts. Father always drove with a firm grip on the reins;
and though now so terribly wounded,
he was master of the situation, and succeeded in getting hold of poor, frightened Prince; and calmed him almost instantly, by patting him on the head and neck. He thought about of his master; and had never been whipped nor scolded. Father had a nice way with all of his animals, so that they never shook with fear when he came near them. I noted as soon as I had jumped to my feet that father's face was streaming with blood and that he did not speak. I took care of the horse; and father bound up his own face with handkerchiefs and a scarf. He made signs for me to look at a stone rising two feet above the ground upon which his head had struck when we went over, in that flash of a second. The wonder is that he was not instantly killed! I think he must have had an intuition to keep his head raised well up in the air. His left arm was about me and I didn't receive so much as a scratch. I was terribly frightened over dear father and wanted badly to cry, but smothered it back, until I got home and had an opportunity to go abide by myself. After a moment, he began to suffer great agony through the loss of his master; and had never been whipped nor scolded. Father

Stops Headache in Five Minutes

A Wonderful Formula Ends Aches and Pains Almost Like Magic, Something Better and Safer

Thousands of men and women are now stopping throbbing, sick, dizzy, splitting headaches, as well as the excruciating pains of rheumatism, neuritis, toothache, etc., with a marvelous new formula that is said to be far superior to anything heretofore used.

It contains no aspirin, acetanilid, etc., and is absolutely safe and harmless. This remarkable formula, called A-VOL, is being prescribed by thousands of doctors, dentists and welfare nurses because of the quick, efficient way it relieves all types of aches and pains without depressing the heart, or causing any other harmful effects. A-VOL quickly stops the most severe pain, leaving the patient refreshed and feeling fine. Especially effective in women's period pains.

To quickly prove to yourself that this is truly a remarkable formula, just step into your nearest drug store and get a package of A-VOL for a few cents. Take a couple of tablets right there. If your pain is not gone in five minutes, the clerk will return your money.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I. —From his fur post, situated in the Canadian north, Jim Stuart, trader in charge, sights an overturned canoe in the lake. With his headman, Omar, he rescues the man, Omari, son of Omar LeBlond, daughter of his rival in the fur business. Made comfortable at the fort, Jim's friend, Andrew Christie, disappears with Paradise, his unscrupulous half-breed Lieutenant, in search of the missing. Jim and the meeting is embarrassing, though LeBlond acknowledges his debt of gratitude to Sunset House.

CHAPTER II. —Before leaving, Andrew Christie arranges to exchange notes on a certain island. Going there, Jim finds the Indian has been shot to travel toward the LeBlond post, on the way he overturns the boat, leaving him half-dead enemy on the beach.

CHAPTER III. —Jim, with Omar, goes to discuss plans with his superior, Andrew Christie. Displeased at the trade showings made by the Indians, he demands immediate payment, one year to "make it right." He leaves the post with a heavy heart, fearing he will be blamed for the accident, and returns to the fort to inform Jim of the attempt fails, and Jim takes the blame. —LeBlond.

CHAPTER IV. —After hearing the story, LeBlond orders Paradise, Jim and Jim's people to return to the fort, the Indian to apologize to the other. Jim and Jim's people request one year to "make it right." Jim leaves the post with a heavy heart, fearing he will be blamed for the accident, and returns to the fort to inform Jim of the attempt fails, and Jim takes the blame. —LeBlond.

"You hear?" said Jim.
"No!" groaned Jim, bolting toward his gun which stood propped against a bush. "If they want war—give it to 'em!"

Again the twilight silence was split by the guns on the mainland, and bullets scattered around the camp, while the excited Smoke yelled as he raced back and forth, still untouched.

"They'll ruin the canoes if we don't stop 'em!" informed the maddest for trader, as he drew himself within reach of his gun. "Here, Smoke, they'll get you! Here! Down!"

Then the rifles of Omar and Esau opened on the ambush two hundred yards across the strait. Shortly the repeating guns of the three men, firing at the flashes, made the opposite shore too hot for the single shot rifles in the ambush. The shooting stopped. "Well, the war on the Pipstone is on, Omar," called Jim. "I think they're making their getaway; afraid they'll cross in the canoe in the dusk and hunt 'em."

Knowing that the sights were now invisible in the dusk of the opposite shore, Jim stood up, to find Omar calmly examining the canoe.

"Now who do you suppose killed that trick, Jim?"

"There good men follow us from the camp."

"I suppose they're some of Paradise people, and they don't know that they have to see Jim again."

Their voices and Jim's heard them into the darkness of which even the passing drum did not penetrate.

"They'll never stand to be seen. Do the dogs howl when I tell 'em? Do the dogs howl when I tell 'em of that Pipstone?" The old breed pointed to the long distance. Jim heard from the camp at his words.

"Yes, I guess people just as in anything now. They're after us and they'll get us too, in this country, if we're not careful. Come pretty close with that first shot. Got my rifle ready my hand. I didn't know an Indian could shoot so straight."

"Once more, go on! follow us!" said Jim. "We'll move down, we drop down to make an all call for them to go in."

"All right," agreed Omar. "We make a big bunch for 'em."

As the light faded before the moon, Jim, the night, the potsherd, and the gun, all silent, left the fort. He had come through the woods, the water, and the rocks, to the place where Jim had sent him.

Jim struck the wrinkled mask of the old Indian, framed in his long hair. He made him, to use the old Indian's words, "the old Indian." Jim had them down to the ground, and each of them down to the bottom of the water. Jim had them down to the bottom of the water.

"You have lived through many years," he said. "Wisdom has come to you through the years. You know that Jingwak is a fool or you would not sit here and look me in the eye. This Pipstone tribe who would take the lead, thus started, and Jim's mission was not one of punishment. Yet he had to defend himself, and Omar and Esau would be hard to handle."

The sun was high in the sky on the following morning before the three who waited in the river willows saw a canoe from the land shore. Unconsciously the two paddlers were silent that the pipstone was some where far ahead of them. Dances, for the men in the willows plainly heard their voices.

There was the scuffed skin of dried on steel as three rifles were cocked. Then the willows were silent. Presently, as the birch bark canoe drifted abreast of the ambush, there was a roar, as the guns spat from the shore. The paddle of the bowman fell, splintered from his hands. With a cry of terror the sternman swung the nose of the craft toward the opposite bank, as the rifles again exploded.

In silence the Indian rose, shook hands, and went to his birch bark. He pushed out from the shore, he said to Jim, who followed him with the customary, "bo-jos." "Your canoe will never pass this way again."

"Well, what d'you make of him?" asked Jim of the silent figures of his friends.

"Was he nosing around trying to find out something, or was he bringing a friendly warning?"

"He is fr'en' of Jingwak," said Esau, "and Jingwak is scared."

"Ah-hah!" agreed Omar. "He sees scared. He got no Parades to help him."

Jim's tumb-line was cocked. Then the willows were silent.

As the birch bark canoe drifted abreast of the ambush, there was a roar, as the guns spat from the shore. The paddle of the bowman fell, splintered from his hands. With a cry of terror the sternman swung the nose of the craft toward the opposite bank, as the rifles again exploded.

Indians, with their young men to tell him we are coming. Tell him that Omar Bolswert who broke the neck of Big Pierre, at Fort Steven, with his fist, is coming to drive him out of the Sturgeon river country. Tell him if he stays, Omar Bolswert, who sets bear-traps with his hands, will tear his tongue from his throat!"

Infused with passion, Omar stood over the squatting figure of the old Indian, who gazed up at him with a look of mingled surprise and regret.

"You think me the friend of Jingwak and this Parades," he said calmly.

"You are wrong. I come here because I am their enemy. Jingwak took my daughter from me."

harried idealists of all times to ponder.

It was out of these evenings that there spun itself around Vesta the web of romance. The most chafing of the teasing group around her, brilliant young Alnsworth, became her ardent, headstrong wooer.

"I don't want to marry," said Vesta, knowing from the first time he asked that she would. "I've seen too much. Suffered too much of the suffering of others. Besides, my work is laid out for me."

In the end, of course, she did marry him, and they were to establish the first free clinic of its kind in the middle western city in which they dwelt. But against having children, she did resolutely hold out over a period of four years.

"My own sins are my own. I won't bring a child into a world into which it does not ask to be born. The fact that I am happy does not insure happiness for my offspring. I don't want a baby."

At the end of four years, when she was most beautiful, there was to be a child and once more the convulsions of Vesta went down before inherent love of life.

"Well name it Vesta," said Alnsworth.

"We'll name it Gregory," said Vesta.

When the twins were born, they named them Vesta and Gregory.

Quantities of Mexican

Silver Used by Chinese

Chinese financial transactions are generally made in terms of Mexican dollars. For instance, newspapers will report that the government of China has appropriated "$1,000,000 Mexican" for this or that purpose.

The Mexican dollar or peso is worth slightly less than 50 cents in American money.

During the early decades of the Nineteenth century the Spanish dollar was introduced into China by western traders. Previously to that time there was no coin in general circulation in China except the small copper pieces known as the cash. In larger transactions uncoined silver bullion was employed, one Chinese ounce of silver being called a tael. Chinese merchants found the western coins more convenient than bullion as a circulating medium and Spanish dollars were imported in large numbers.

A shortage in the supply of Spanish dollars led to the introduction of Mexican dollars about 1740. Within a very few years these coins, minted in Mexico by the Mexican government, circulated freely everywhere in China and were practically the only currency which had universal acceptance in that country. Their only rivals were British dollars coined in India or Hongkong and circulated in Chinese seaports. The continual exportation of Mexican dollars to China and other oriental countries on a silver basis became an important factor in the distribution of Mexican silver.

In 1902 China signed a treaty with Great Britain in which she agreed to establish a uniform system of currency. Yuan Shih-kai, during his reign, coined Chinese silver dollars in the hope of initiating currency reforms, and since then many efforts have been made to substitute native coins for Mexican dollars. Consequently, although Chinese finances are still reckoned in terms of Mexican dollars, the coins themselves are becoming scarce in China and their place is being rapidly taken by silver dollars of equal weight and value coined in China or Hongkong.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Paternity of Violin

Caspar S. Duifoprugger, named Tiefenbäcker, a Bavarian who became a naturalized Frenchman, was long reputed to be the first maker of violins, but this has since been proved to be wrong.

The violins were the immediate predecessors of the violin and the violins were subject in construction to all of the liberties which the builder might choose to take with them. The creation of the violin of today is veiled in mystery which the most ardent discussions on the part of the specialists have been unable to solve.

Luther (a violin and lute maker) by the name of Kerlino, who lived in Brescia about the year 1450, is also credited with the discovery of the violin. All in all, while it is possible that the paternity of the violin may be conceded to Gasparo da Salo, it must be considered that Maggini of Brescia is said to be the first to give the violin its present form.

Historic American Fort

Fort McHenry was established in 1704 on a reservation of 25 acres on Whetstone place, Patapsco river, Md., three miles from Baltimore. Although the site was first occupied for military purposes in 1775, it was only established as a permanent fortification in 1794. It was named after James McHenry, one of Washington's severest critics during the Revolution and secretary of war in 1798. In September, 1813, the fort successfully withstood bombardment by the British fleet under Admiral Cockburn. It was this attack which suggested Francis Scott Key's "Star-Spangled Banner."

Resourcefulness

We cannot but admire the resource of the pupil who wrote down "On the heads!" in answer to a question as to where the kings of England were crowned, and a similarly naive reply was given by another student in response to the question, "Explain what happens when there is an eclipse of the sun?" when he answered, really fully enough, "A great many people go out to see it."—Christian Science Monitor.

CRITICISM

Criticism may help or hinder us, inspire us to renewed and greater effort or cause us to give up the fight and sink deep into despair. The fact that your best friend has begun to find fault with you, is no evidence that he has ceased to be your friend. It may be that he is just beginning to be the friend you most need. To see ourselves as we appear in the eyes of the critic may be good for us. We are apt to damn in others that of which we are unconscious in our own lives, and that man is a friend, no matter what his motive, who enables us to "see ourselves as others see us." So much for the man who is under the microscope of the critic. But, oh, you critic, look for the beam in your own eye first, then, remember this: Criticism is not necessarily adverse, and a word of commendation is a great incentive to righteous endeavor.

SOUTH PARIS 2—GOULD 2

After staging eight innings of fine baseball, the score knotted 2-2, the Gould Academy team blew up and allowed the visitors five runs on one hit and five errors.

Cummings hit a Homer with one on in the fourth for South Paris. Pratt's excellent pitching was another factor in their victory as he struck out 14 men and allowed six hits.

For Gould Brownie started both at bat and in the field. He struck out 14 men and allowed only five hits. He also got two of the Academy's six hits, one of them a double. Douglas connected for a nice three bagger in the sixth inning and scored on an infield play. The score:
